

Day in a Life - Paynetics Internship

Starting with Paynetics on their Business Development Internship programme at the centre of the FinTech industry and straight from education can be challenging. It's a fast-paced environment, however, with the ongoing support of my team at Paynetics based in the UK and our international colleagues based in Sofia, I have learnt so much and added great value to my professional growth and to the business.

There are a broad range of projects and initiatives to get involved in from day one. A key responsibility of mine is the development of the Paynetics Employee Handbook; working closely with the CEO, Head of Sales, and the HR department to bring this big project to life. Additionally, I have been able to contribute to the internal business meetings, such as sharing my ideas & opinions on regulation such as GDPR which is tremendously important in business performance. Whilst shadowing external meetings with customers and partners.

Furthermore, there have been multiple webinars and events in the diary to build by network and knowledge. A favourite was attending the Payments 101 accredited training course in association with the Emerging Payments Association. This enabled me to gain invaluable knowledge to get me started in my career in FinTech. A strong foundation for understanding how payments operate. My advice to anyone thinking of applying for an Internship at Paynetics is to have a great passion to learn, adapt and develop. Best of luck!
